

was presented to individuals dedicated to global Internet connectivity, promoting innovation, and protecting children online.

Commissioner Tate won international praise during her service at the FCC as a leading voice on issues affecting families and children, and helped craft communications policy to ensure that advances in communications technologies benefit all Americans in a safe, secure manner. As a result, she is known throughout the telecommunications industry as the "Children's Commissioner" for her dedication to online safety.

Receipt of ITU's Telecommunication & Information Society Award further cements Commissioner Tate's impact on the communications space during her service at the FCC, and follows a litany of awards following her departure from the Commission, including an Award for Outstanding Public Service from Common Sense Media, the Good Scout Award from the Boy Scouts of America, the Carol Reilly Award from the New York State Broadcasters Association, the Touchstones of Leadership Award for Public Service from Women in Cable Television, the YW Award from the Academy for Women of Achievement, and the Jerry Duvall Public Service Award from the Phoenix Center for Advanced Public Policy Studies.

On behalf of constituents throughout Tennessee's 7th District, I applaud Commissioner Tate for her lifetime body of work, and congratulate her well-deserved receipt of the 2009 Telecommunication & Information Society Award.

COMMENDING CHANDRA BROWN

HON. KURT SCHRADER

OF OREGON

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 19, 2009

Mr. SCHRADER. Madam Speaker, I rise today to honor America's entrepreneurs, those distinguished individuals who support our communities, drive innovation, and keep our nation strong. Small businesses bring fresh ideas to the table, develop the resources to meet the demands of an ever-changing world, and make a meaningful impact on our neighborhoods. Entrepreneurs are responsible for providing 60 to 80 percent of all new jobs, giving them the potential to propel rapid economic growth and expand ever-developing fields. Some of the country's largest companies began as start-ups in small offices, homes and garages exploring these new fields. Limited only by their imagination, these firms performed cutting-edge work in emerging industries that have become the very foundation of our society.

As our nation and the world face the most difficult economic conditions in decades, entrepreneurs have the potential to lead us back to prosperity. The resiliency and adaptability shown by small businesses in past recessions demonstrate their capability to meet the challenges standing in their way and emerge stronger than ever. America's small businesses will drive the economic recovery from this downturn and our economy will emerge stronger than ever. Times may be tough, but America's entrepreneurial spirit is tougher.

To recognize the monumental achievements of our nation's small firms, the Small Business Administration (SBA) has declared May 17–23 as the 46th Annual National Small Business Week. The House Small Business Committee is celebrating all our country's hard-working entrepreneurs by saluting the Heroes of Small Business, those men and women who have shown the strength, leadership, and resourcefulness that keeps our economy moving forward.

I ask that you, Madam Speaker, and the entire U.S. House of Representatives join me in recognizing and thanking Ms. Chandra Brown for her tremendous accomplishments on behalf of small businesses. Ms. Brown currently serves as president of Oregon Iron Works' subsidiary United Streetcar, the only modern streetcar manufacturer in the United States. With over 15 years of experience with Oregon Iron Works, she is responsible for overall business development and marketing as the company's vice president.

Recognized by Oregon's economic community as one the state's top business leaders, Ms. Brown was named to the Oregon Innovation Council in 2005 by Governor Ted Kulongoski. She sits on numerous non-profit boards, including serving as Vice Chair of the Oregon Wave Energy Trust, which promotes job creation through the emerging wave energy industry. Ms. Brown has a bachelor's degree in marketing and an M.B.A. in international marketing from Miami University.

Madam Speaker, Ms. Brown has exemplified the remarkable accomplishments of which America's entrepreneurs are capable. This week, she will testify before the House Small Business Committee to share her story. I ask that you and the entire U.S. House of Representatives join with me in honoring her for the extraordinary work she has done for the small business economy. Her efforts demonstrate that if given the right resources, America's small businesses can be the catalysts that lift our economy from the current downturn and put us on the road to recovery.

JACK KEMP'S LIFE PROVIDES IDEAS

HON. TOM MCCLINTOCK

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 19, 2009

Mr. MCCLINTOCK. Madam Speaker, in memory of Jack Kemp, I would like the following article included in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

REPUBLICANS LOOKING FOR A MODERN INSPIRATION? JACK KEMP'S LIFE PROVIDES IDEAS

(By Jack Cox)

There has been much press coverage these days about the problems of the Republican Party seeking a new identity that resonates with Americans. Too often, Republicans and conservatives are criticized for lacking compassion and concern for many social issues of interest to many Americans. In the 1960's, Conservatives had little involvement in the historic battle for civil rights. Most Republicans opposed the civil rights act in 1964, including Presidential candidate Barry Goldwater, and a great deal of resentment grew within the African American community over this apparent indifference.

It was, of course, Republicans with President Lincoln that led the battle to end slavery and liberate blacks from the intolerable practice. Thirty two years earlier, William Wilberforce, a noted Member of Parliament and British Christian leader had led the battle to end slavery in England. Unfortunately, during the last half of the 20th Century too many conservatives, Republicans specifically, were uninvolved in the battle. That disinterest was tied not to bigotry but rather other priorities including a major battle to oppose the spread of Communism from the Soviet Union and "Red China." Senator Goldwater, a charter member of the Phoenix NAACP, opposed it on states' rights grounds.

It was a warm summer day during the 1996 Presidential Campaign that the National Association of Black Journalists annual convention was held in Nashville. The organization, as most journalism groups, invites Presidential candidates to address their members. On that humid Tennessee day Republican Presidential Candidate Robert Dole and Vice Presidential Candidate Jack Kemp were slated to speak to the several thousand African American journalists from around the nation. Most Republicans would have described this group as anything but a friendly organization to GOP candidates.

Senator Dole was introduced with polite applause. Then Jack Kemp was introduced and he received a standing ovation. I sat in awe as these black Americans applauded a white Republican leader. Jack stayed after his speech and shook the hand of every young journalist who wanted to meet him. There was no story about this incident and it has received no notice that I have ever seen. Why did Jack get this reception? It is easy to understand why — Jack Kemp cared and he demonstrated that care over a life time. He was committed to the wisdom of a free market but he also saw that sometimes people fell through the cracks and that government has the responsibility to help them.

However, Jack was committed to giving people opportunity, not hand outs. He had the strong respect of millions of Americans. In my many personal conversations with Jack and my work with him, that caring attitude came through like a laser beam! Jack, in the past decade, spoke strongly for a guest worker program for illegal immigrants and a method for these folks to become legal residents of the United States. Jack saw these people as hard workers who were trying to achieve the American dream, one sought by millions from throughout the world.

Jack observed one time "Republicans many times can't get the words 'equality of opportunity' out of their mouths. Their lips do not form that way." He also declared "There really has not been a strong Republican message to either the poor or the African American community at large."

He also noted "When people lack jobs, opportunity, and ownership of property they have little or no stake in their communities."

In 1964, Senator Barry Goldwater was defeated for the presidency. Look Magazine, shortly after the solid defeat, asked writer Richard Cornuelle to write a piece entitled a "Positive Agenda for the Republican Party." In 1965, Cornuelle published a new book "Reclaiming the American Dream." Cornuelle, like Jack Kemp, called on Republicans to have answers and a positive agenda instead of constant opposition to government. He coined the phrase "the independent section" which described the vital role that associations, churches, and individuals play in meeting the needs of society.

Unfortunately, Dick Cornuelle's ideas, like Jack Kemp's, were not seen as providing direction for the future of the Republican Party by some leaders. Jack Kemp was a dynamic individual who, like Ronald Reagan, always saw a glass half full rather than half empty. If the Republican Party is to begin
